hey are the kinetic energy in San Diego. They make the place move. The 500 leaders profiled within these pages are the driving force behind the economy and the community in the southwest corner of the United States. Without them, the region stands still.

Today, as in years past, the San Diego Business Journal presents its list of 500 most influential community leaders with its SD500 special issue.

Tapping its staff and its networks, the team at the San Diego Business Journal assembled the list of individuals that now sits before you. Though some people make repeat appearances, the current list is not entirely the same as last year's. Which makes sense, because no two years are alike.

The SD500 is similar in scope to the San Diego Business Journal's Book of Lists, which tallies up San Diego's leading companies.

The SD500 groups its members by specialties or vertical markets, beginning with civic leaders.

IQHQ Raises $1.7 Billion in Equity

FINANCE: Funding Coming From New and Existing Partners

■ By RAY HUARD

IQHQ, the Solana Beach firm behind the planned $1.5 billion life science campus in downtown San Diego, has raised $1.7 billion in equity from new and existing partners.

"It's exciting times," said John Bonanno, chief investment officer of IQHQ. "It does take an awful lot of capital to develop large life science projects."

Bonanno said the funding puts the company's financing at just under $2.5 billion, adding that the new money is a testament to investor confidence in the year-old firm.

"It's an awful lot of money. It goes pretty quickly when you're dealing with projects in excess of $1 billion, very large projects," Bonanno said.

When the company started raising capital, the firm didn't have a history to build on.

BIOTECH: Co. Raises $1.62 Billion

■ By FRED GRIER

Maravai LifeSciences, which provides products used to develop drug therapies and novel vaccines, has raised $1.62 billion in an upsized initial public stock offering.

The event took place on Nov. 13, and the San Diego-based firm projected to sell 50 million shares at between $24 and $27, expecting to net proceeds of about $1.18 billion.

The company sold 60 million shares at $27 per share, which was at the high end of its projected IPO price range. The shares began trading Friday on the Nasdaq exchange under the ticker symbol MRVI.

Maravai's prospectus lists 14 underwriters, led by Morgan Stanley, Jefferies and Goldman Sachs.

Reducing Waste

The city of San Diego has recognized 10 businesses and institutions that have implemented or expanded innovative waste reduction and recycling programs.

The programs honored included everything from establishing a cigarette butt collection and recycling program, to creating a system to track solid waste tonnage to identify diversion opportunities.

Those honored were: LJ Crafted Wines where they have had wine membership utilizing reusable bottles with swing tops that are returned and exchanged. The San Diego County Regional Airport Authority for establishing a cigarette butt collection and recycling program. The butts are shipped TerraCycle which composts the cigarette paper and tobacco. The plastic filters are recycled and turned into outdoor benches and tables. San Diego Mesa College composted 16.34 tons of pre-consumer food scraps from campus cafeterias and coffee shops for the on-campus garden. UC San Diego had all construction and demolition projects be required to divert 75% of debris from landfills. San Diego State University implemented the SkySpark solid waste tracking system which is an online interactive waste dashboard that tracks tonnages specific to buildings on campus to help analyze and identify diversion opportunities. Johnson R&D made efforts to become a paperless facility, switching to digital signage to reduce the number of posters and flyers. The Hazard Center hosted an annual recycle and spring clean up event for tenants to properly dispose of items that normally are not recycled. The San Diego Zoo was honored for recycling electricity via a one-megawatt energy battery that stores and discharges energy during peak hours to assist with park operations. Sharp Healthcare diverted 4.2 million pounds of material from being dumped in the landfill. This included composting 500,000 pounds of food waste and reprocessing 106,000 pounds of surgical instruments. The San Diego Food Bank used a "Turbo Separator" to take unopened but damaged and inedible cans, boxes, and jars of food and separate the food from the packaging for compost and recycling.

"By reducing their carbon footprint in our communities, these workplaces are showing the community they care about the city's future," said Gene Matter, the city's environmental services interim director.

In this era of COVID-19, bringing holiday cheer to those less fortunate has never been more important. Two local companies, Allen Matkins Law Firm and San Diego Fluid Systems Technologies joined Father Joe's Villages' Thanksgiving Day 5K to give back to their communities in a special way.

With social distancing being the norm the event could not be held in Balboa Park as it has for 18 years, so things looked a little different with each teammate being required to complete the "5K Your Way remotely -from a location of their choice.

A great idea, not only did it allow for employees to bond while maintaining social distancing, but it opened up the event to more people who could participate at their own speed.

Virbela Sees Record Growth for Its Virtual Worlds

TECH: Company Aims to Be International Player

■ By FRED GRIER

San Diego-based Virbela, a company which builds engaging virtual worlds for remote work, learning, and events, has seen record user growth and international adoption for its online platform.

Benefiting from virtual conference trends caused by the coronavirus, the company has seen roughly a 600% increase in sales since March.

It also saw an 78% increase in new user growth over the second quarter, with international markets accounting for 50% growth in the third quarter.

Alex Howland CEO and President Virbela

Virbela has quickly become the industry go-to for hosting large-scale virtual events, business conferences and online educational programs through an immersive 3D experience.

Notable clients using its platform include Stanford Graduate School of Business, the Office of Naval Research, University of California, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Honor Foundation, and eXp Realty.

To accommodate rapid growth, the La Jolla-based company has scaled its team from 20 to 140 staffers over the last 12 months.

"This past year has brought a global surge of interest in new tools for remote work, distance learning and virtual events. People are burned out from the overload of video conferencing, and organizations are looking for solutions that recreate the community and social benefits of in-person interactions," said Alex Howland, president and co-founder of Virbela.

Ubiq Security Raises $6.4M in Seed Equity Round

TECH: Startup Aims to Attract Thousands of Developers

■ BY FRED GRIER

San Diego-based Ubiq Security, a cybersecurity startup working to simplify encryption, has closed a $6.4 million seed equity round.

The round was led by Okapi Venture Capital and included participation from TenOneTen Ventures, Cove Fund, DLA Piper Venture, Volta Global and Alexandria Venture Investments.

The company will use the funds to accelerate platform development, developer relations, and customer acquisition, said Wias Issa founder and CEO of Ubiq.

Founded in 2019, Ubiq's mission is to simplify encryption for developers.

Earlier this year, the company launched its API-based developer platform aimed at helping global organizations secure their data while eliminating the guesswork, complexity of cryptography and encryption.

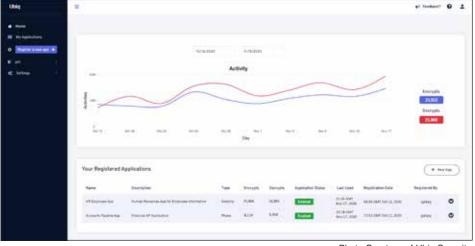

Enabling Developers

Its API-based encryption platform provides developers the tools they need to quickly add robust encryption to their applications and easily use the services they need to manage their keys and products.

In particular,

CEO Ubiq Security

Ubiq's software provides a simple dashboard for developers enabling them to encrypt data across applications and programming languages, cloud environments, and storage types.

the encryption can be added to an application with a few lines of code and two calls using its application programming interface, or API.

"The software that powers today's global conomy is built by some of the brightest developers in the world, whose expertise revolves around building fantastic products and experiences —generally not security and cryptography," said Issa. "Ubiq's software eliminates the costly and uphill battles for CTO's, CISOs, and compliance leaders, helping ensure the data in their products is secure."

The company's competitive advantage is that it can secure any form of data, regardless of its type or storage location, without impacting user experience or system performance.

In addition, the software can easily integrates into existing application, IoT devices, or can be installed on servers or endpoints

Working With Defense

Clients using its platform include the U.S. Army, and the U.S. Department of Homeland Security. The company is also working with Fortune 500 firms such as Verizon, Hitachi, and DLT Solutions.

Today, there is roughly 18 million active developers worldwide, the company is betting its strategy to make encryption as simple as possible will lead to significant adoption.

Ubiq is not the first to try to make adding encryption as simple as possible for StrongSalt, a security firm also debuted its own encryption-as-a-service platform focused on making encryption easy for developers to incorporate into their applications.

Building in San Diego

Looking forward, the startup will be focused on customer validation and user growth. The goal is to have several thousand developers actively using our platform, said Issa.

The company also may close another round of financing within the next six to nine months.

"By the end of 2021 and moving in 2022, we're going to put the foot on the gas as we acquire more customers," said Issa. "We've already started to get interest from Blue Chip investors, top VC firms, as well as corporate investment arms at large technology companies. People are starting to appreciate the problem set."

QED Systems to Plan Ship Maintenance

DEFENSE: U.S. Navy Could Extend the Three-Year Contract at its Option

A U.S. Navy ship is a complex human creation that exists in a harsh world. The weather and elements are not kind to it. The ship's mission adds plenty of other stresses. Realizing this, the Navy sets aside time to maintain and modernize its ships.

A Virginia company, QED Systems Inc., helps the Navy plan such maintenance periods. In a deal that will bring tens of millions of dollars to the San Diego region, QED received a three-year contract to provide such services to the Navy.

The deal calls on QED to provide engineering and planning support services. It will work in San Diego and two other port cities to help the Navy plan maintenance and modernization for various types of surface ships, including guided missile cruisers, guided missile destroyers and various types of amphibious assault ships.

The entire deal is worth $76.4 million. The contract runs through October 2023. Some 43% percent of the contract — or $32.9 million — will be performed in San

The Navy has options on the contract that would increase the total value of the work to $229.4 million.

QED, which has its main office in Virginia Beach, Virginia, was the only bidder on the deal. The Naval Sea Systems Command of Washington, D.C. awarded the contract, announced on Oct. 28.

QED has been providing planning services in support of U.S. Navy maintenance QED Systems' maintenance planning efforts will cover several types of U.S. Navy surface ships, including guided missile destroyers similar to the USS Paul Hamilton pictured here.

and modernization evolutions from the time the company first started in 1969. The business also plans work on U.S. Navy aircraft carriers and littoral combat ships.

Viasat to Conduct Studies for Air Force

The U.S. Air Force awarded Viasat Inc. (Nasdaq: VSAT) an indefinite delivery, indefinite quantity contract for development of prototype space systems. The contract has a ceiling of $50.8 million and work will be done in Carlsbad. Under the deal, Viasat will provide studies, design, manufacturing, integration, performance qualification, network space segment elements, launch, flight and demonstration of prototype space systems. This also includes the development, integration and demonstration with ground terminals in conjunction with the government Ground Segment to reduce risk and assess performance and functionality for future protected service. It includes the associated program management, system engineering, certification, integration, test and evaluation and configuration management. Work is expected to be completed by February 2026. The award is the result of a competitive acquisition with one offer received. The Air Force Research Laboratory at Kirtland Air Force Base, New Mexico awarded the deal, announced on Nov. 20.

AAR to Support Clipper Aircraft

The U.S. Navy awarded AAR Government Services Inc. an aircraft support contract that could be worth as much as $148.4 million over five years. Some 9% of the deal will be performed at Naval Air Station North Island, meaning the local impact could be as much as $13 million.

Under the indefinite delivery, indefinite quantity contract, AAR will provide logistics support for operating and maintaining the C-40A Clipper aircraft — the military version of the Boeing 737-700C — as well as aircraft subsystems, appliances and support equipment.

The deal was competitively procured via an electronic request for proposal. The government received three offers. The Naval Air Systems Command at Patuxent River, Maryland, awarded the deal, announced on Nov. 23.

Weather Radar Work Awarded

The U.S. Navy awarded New Jersey-based Basic Commerce and Industries Inc. a five-year contract for research, development, production, integration, installation, software support and maintenance of Weather Radar Through-the-Sensor systems. Some 5% of the work will be performed in San Diego. The indefinite delivery, indefinite quantity contract has a $12.3 million ceiling. The Naval Information Warfare Center Pacific, San Diego awarded the deal, announced on Aug. 28. ■

Cross Border Adds Facial Recognition Tech

Pedestrian Skybridge Hopes to Further Secure Check-In Process

■ By MARIEL CONCEPCION

Cross Border Xpress (CBX) is improving its checkin process.

The 390-foot-long pedestrian skybridge that connects San Diego directly to the Tijuana International Airport has implemented a biometric facial comparison technology to its terminal. The addition, according to CBX CEO Jorge Goytortua, is to provide travelers a streamlined and secure touchless option, specifically during COVID-19.

Travel Experience

"The travel has been hugely impacted because of COVID-19, especially the first few months. But that number has been increasing month-over-month," he said. "In April, we were at 95% of customer count. By May, we were down 85%. Currently, we are at 30% down year-over-year. So, the market has been really improving. With this many people willing to travel, we are taking all sorts of different precautions to make sure the travel experience is seamless, secure, fast, efficient and especially touchless."

Jorge Goytortua CEO Cross Border Xpress

CBX has added eight physical facial recognition portals to be used by customers coming into the United States, said Goytortua, at the U.S. Customs Border and Protection (CBP) stations. Travelers arriving at the primary booth at CBP will have their photo taken, he said. Within a matter of seconds, that image will be linked to all of that individual's travel documents, allowing the customer to cross the border more expeditiously.

The biometric facial recognition technology is an initiative that U.S. entities have been implementing for a while, said Goytortua. But, CBX is the first pedestrian border bridge to successfully implement the feature.

Cross Border Xpress App

Concurrently, CBX launched the Cross Border Xpress app, he said. In addition to being able to purchase tickets via the CBX website and through airlines, passengers can now buy tickets more efficiently via their mobile devices. Additionally, travelers can fill out immigration cards and healthy questionnaires via the app, Goytortua said, the latter which is now a requirement for those traveling through Mexico as a result of the pandemic.

"Customers can link their tickets on the app and access CBX without any personal contact with someone," he said. "All of that developed within the last few months (since COVID-19)."

Fully Touchless

With the facial comparison advancement, CBX is pretty much fully touchless, which was the goal, said Goytortua. Also on the coronavirus front, CBX is making sure all travelers are practicing social distancing as well as wearing face masks, among other safety protocols. As a result, CBX was recently awarded a "Safe Travels" stamp, which is a global safety and hygiene certification by the World Travel and Tourism Council.

The Escondido-based company recently opened Cork & Knife, a small batch wine store that will offer close to 100 varieties for both in-person and online purchase. The over 1,000 square foot location, which is part of a 10,000 square foot space that was formerly a Marie Callender's restaurant, will also specialize in artisan meats and cheeses from around the world, cheese and wine pairings, seasonal tapas and catering.

Derry Robert Van Nortwick is the project manager for Cork & Knife. He said the impetus behind the venture was to create a new multi-concept business model that provides relatively low overhead and various revenue stream

Cork & Knife will be housed alongside Grand Restaurant Group's newest DiCicco's restaurant, which will also be located where Marie Callender's used to be. DiCicco's is scheduled to open in Escondido by the end of year. The two food places will have separate entrances, he said.

"I think restaurateurs and the industry overall has been moving this way for a while. The cost of doing business is going up everywhere you go, especially in hospitality, which has now taken such a gut punch with COVID-19," said Van Nortwick. "In my world, I have to think of the industry and where it is going – a lot of it is going toward lower overhead in terms of human resources. So, this model only requires a couple of folks to run it but offers many ways to make a sale and engage and find a customer. That is the framework of the business model. People are thinking, 'how can I work in this world, in a marketplace that is continuously changing and with food cost going up?' You have to think outside the box."

Cork & Knife functions as a wine shop as well as a cheese and meat retail store, he said. There are also roughly 15 tables that patrons can sit at and enjoy a cheese board or a small tapas plate and wine, which adds a social aspect to Cork & Knife, said Van Nortwick. Additionally, customers can visit the Cork & Knife site and order cheese and cured meat platters as part of the catering program.

Van Nortwick described the atmosphere at Cork & Knife as a clean and airy aesthetic. He said the interior features bright colors, brass elements and a lot of stone. The goal, he said, is for customers to feel happy when they step foot inside.

$55 Million in 2021

The location, which cost Grand Restaurant Group about $42,000 to build-out, will employ two to three staff members, said Van Nortwick. The Escondido opening will be followed by another location in Rancho Santa Fe (700 square feet) and then another in Clovis (1,500 square feet), a city near Fresno.

With the new additions and despite the economic downturn due to the pandemic, the company's revenue is projected to grow from roughly $45 million in 2019 to about $55 million by the end of 2021.

Van Nortwick said, although San Diego has shut down indoor dining again in response to increasing coronavirus infection rates, he is bullish on the future of Cork & Knife.

"You know, when you are an entrepreneurial person, you have to be extremely optimistic and only concern yourself with the end result," he said. "A lot of things right in front of you are not going to be factors six months from now, a year from now. You can't spend time worrying. You have to persevere and keep going. We are building something for the future of others."

Cautious Optimism

Sandra DiCicco is CEO of Grand Restaurant Group, which also owns Bellamy's and DiCicco's restaurants in Escondido, Nick & G's in Rancho Santa Fe and Carlsbad's Giaola Italian Kitchen. She is equally confident.

"We (Grand Restaurant group) always look towards the future with cautious optimism," she said. "Cork & Knife is a great concept that we were able to leverage into our existing locations to diversify our brands and further serve the communities they are established in. We have faith in our team and the people who have supported us throughout the years to make our ventures successful."

course, and spent time and effort to get the community on a better footing.

There were people like Jim Floros, president and CEO of the Jacobs & Cushman San Diego Food Bank, which stepped up efforts to provide relief for the hungry during COVID-19. There were people like Nancy Sasaki, CEO of United Way of San Diego County, whose organization helped provide utility and rent payments to low-wage workers and those who faced a reduction in wages. And Deacon Jim Vargas, president and CEO of Father Joe's Villages, San Diego's largest homeless services provider. The latter organization's mission to provide comprehensive housing programs and integrated supportive services took on a new urgency as COVID-19 threatened the health of San Diego's poor.

As businesses slowed because of COVID-19, Donna DeBerry, president and CEO of the Central San Diego Black Chamber of Commerce, led efforts to put relief funds in the hands of Black business owners, who were underrepresented in federal business relief efforts. As public health rules limited restaurants' ability to operate indoors, people like Betsy Brennan, CEO of the Downtown San Diego Partnership, helped restaurants generate more business by moving tables outdoors into public spaces such as sidewalks and streets.

In addition to their new efforts, the people in our civic institutions did the same as they in 2019 and before by bringing business people together to improve the community.

Health and Sciences

The health and science community provided a backbone for the San Diego economy as international concerns turned to infectious diseases. It also helped those who fell ill.

Resmed, under the direction of CEO Mick Farrell, almost quadrupled the number of ventilators it produced for people fighting COVID-19. Dexcom, under the direction of President, CEO and Chairman Kevin Sayer, helped patients and health care providers keep diabetes in check.

Real Estate

The SD500 includes the real estate experts, who turn the raw Southern California chaparral into new places to live and work. Just as significantly, they identify properties not quite living up to their potential and reinvent uses for them via infill development.

The U.S. Navy got a new administration building on the waterfront in 2020, with the help of Douglas Manchester, chairman of Manchester Financial Group, and Perry Dealy of Dealy Development

Inc. The vision for the master-planned development surrounding the Navy head-quarters changed, as IQHQ CEO Steve Rosetta and his team reimagined the area as a life science campus.

Luxury real estate kept its allure while housing in prosperous neighborhoods maintained value. Meanwhile, people such as James Schmid of Chelsea Investment Corp. worked to develop affordable housing options.

Leading Industries

Mike Krenn with Connect With San Diego Venture Group and Rory Moore of EvoNexus continued to mentor young companies with new, technology-heavy focuses. Jan Tharp, president and CEO of Bumble Bee Seafood Co., put new life into one of San Diego's oldest companies; the tuna industry's history in San Diego goes way back.

New U.S. Navy leaders came to the region. Rear Adm. Douglas Small became commander of NAVWAR (the information technology command previously known as SPAWAR) while John Pope became the civilian executive director of the organization. NAVWAR bears watching as the Navy moves to modernize its headquarters in Old Town. Across the bay at Naval Base Coronado, Vice Adm. Kenneth Whitesell became the new "air boss" in charge of aircraft carriers and those who fly from them. Whitesell's formal titles are Commander Naval Air Force, U.S. Pacific Fleet.

Professional Services

The attorneys, certified public accountants and others in the professional services category helped clients navigate the new normal. People like William Eigner, partner with Procopoio, Cory, Hargreaves & Savitch, helped clients with mergers and acquisitions. Cayce Lynch has facilitated unprecedented growth at the Tyson & Mendes LLP law firm, and in January became the youngest person in firm history to be named partner.

Victor Ramsauer, CEO of LevitZacks, led his company to be one of the best accounting firms to work for in the United States, as determined by Accounting Today, as well as the top small company to work for in San Diego — on a list compiled by the San Diego Business Journal.

The Bill Howe Family of Companies, run by Bill Howe and Tina Howe, marked its 40th year offering plumbing, heating and other building services. In 1980 there was not truck fleet, and headquarters was an apartment in Pacific Beach.

Finance

Members of the SD500 include the money people, who put capital to its best use. Venture capitalists and fund managers saw diamonds in the rough. Quinn Li, who leads Qualcomm Ventures, placed bets on exciting, technology-focused businesses. One of the more mature is Brain Corp., which gives service vehicles like industrial floor scrubbers the ability to operate autonomously.

Profit was not the sole motive. People such as Kim Folsom, co-founder and CEO of Founders First Capital Partners, dedicated themselves to addressing disparities in revenue and job growth among businesses led by underrepresented founders.

Education

At San Diego's universities, leaders developed new ways of doing things as it became apparent in the spring that people should not congregate on campus. Some, such as Chancellor Pradeep Khosla of the University of California, San Diego, simultaneously oversaw further growth and development of their campuses. Like other K-12 school administrators, Cindy Marten, superintendent of the San Diego Unified School District, took on a new role seeing that the health and educational needs of her students were met in the face of COVID-19. She and other school officials in San Diego County worked to maximize the opportunities in distance education.

Technology

Qualcomm Inc. executives such as CEO Steve Mollenkopf and President Cristiano Amon continued to take fifth-generation (5G) wireless communication into the world at large. The speed of the technology promises great things for the market and for the company. Executives from Cox Communications, such as Senior Vice President and Region Manager Sam Attisha, Cox Business West Region Vice President Larry Coval and Vice President of Field Operations Ingo Hentschel kept people connected via internet and the mass media. With schools closed, businesses such as Cox stepped in to help, providing ways for homebound students to get to their lessons remotely. Also keeping local businesses connected via internet, was Duane Cameron, vice president of Cox Business.

Rick Baldridge took the CEO's job at Viasat with plans to launch fast, worldwide satellite service in a few years. Gerry Borja of Oracle worked to put more veterans to work in tech while also pushing for diversity and inclusion in general. Scot Chisholm and Classy helped raise funds to alleviate pain and promote good causes.

Lifestyle

Chip Brewer continued with big plans for Callaway Golf, announcing that he will grow the company with the addition of Topgolf — an attraction that combines the appeal of a driving range and a sports bar. At TaylorMade Golf, CEO David Abeles oversaw the insertion of data capture technology into the company's golf clubs, offering analytics to the player.

Maria Trakas Pourteymour and Sean Pourteymour of Luna Grill helped Southern California residents eat healthier; Luna Grill has been a growth story for the couple. Brigantine Restaurant Corp.'s Michael Morton opened several new venues on the Embarcadero, next to the sailing ship Star of India and San Diego Bay, attracting both locals and visitors.

Roxana Velasquez, executive director of the San Diego Museum of Art, took her institution's collection outside the walls and across state lines by expanding the museum's content on the internet. David Bennett, general manager of the San Diego Opera, staged performances of "La Bohème" in the parking lot of the Pechanga Arena, bringing both social distancing and a unique flair to the production. Even during COVID-19, culture endures, thrives and gives hope.

Icons

Members of the SD500 have done a lot. Not all of it has been exclusively their doing. Many of these people have inherited organizations and situations built by others. The SD500 stands on the shoulders of a previous generation of San Diegans, which we call the Icons. The number of icons grows every year. If San Diego was a sports team, these would be the people whose numbers had been retired. The icons are profiled elsewhere in this issue.

IQHQ is moving forward to create the Research and Development District (abbreviated RaDD) on more than eight acres on the San Diego waterfront, on the same site as the new U.S. Navy headquarters building.

San Diego 500 Icon List Sees New Additions

LEADERSHIP: Business and Organization Leaders Leave Legacy of Lasting Change

■ By JAY HARN

he San Diego community has many people who have contributed so much to its economic story over the years that they have left a legacy of lasting change. These people can only be described as icons.

This year, The San Diego Business Journal again honors these individuals whose names have become synonymous with the city and the region.

Several new additions have been added to this year's list of icons, including: Lidia S. Martinez who recently retired from Southwest Airlines and has been recognized for her giving spirit and deeply rooted sense of community. She is one of five individuals who successfully created the outreach platform for Southwest to invest and engage in communities of color helping her company set the standard for outreach and corporate social responsibility. She was also honored with a San Diego Business Journal Women in Business Lifetime Achievement Award this past year.

Other new additions include Stath Karras, executive director of the Burnham-Moores Center for Real Estate at the University of San Diego. Karras was also honored with a lifetime achievement award this past year at the SDBJ Commercial Real Estate Awards. Tom Karlo, retiring long-time general manager of KPBS also joins our icon list this year as does Jerry Sanders, CEO of the San Diego Regional Chamber of Commerce. Sanders is a former mayor of San Diego and former police chief who has contributed significantly to the history and well-being of the city and region.

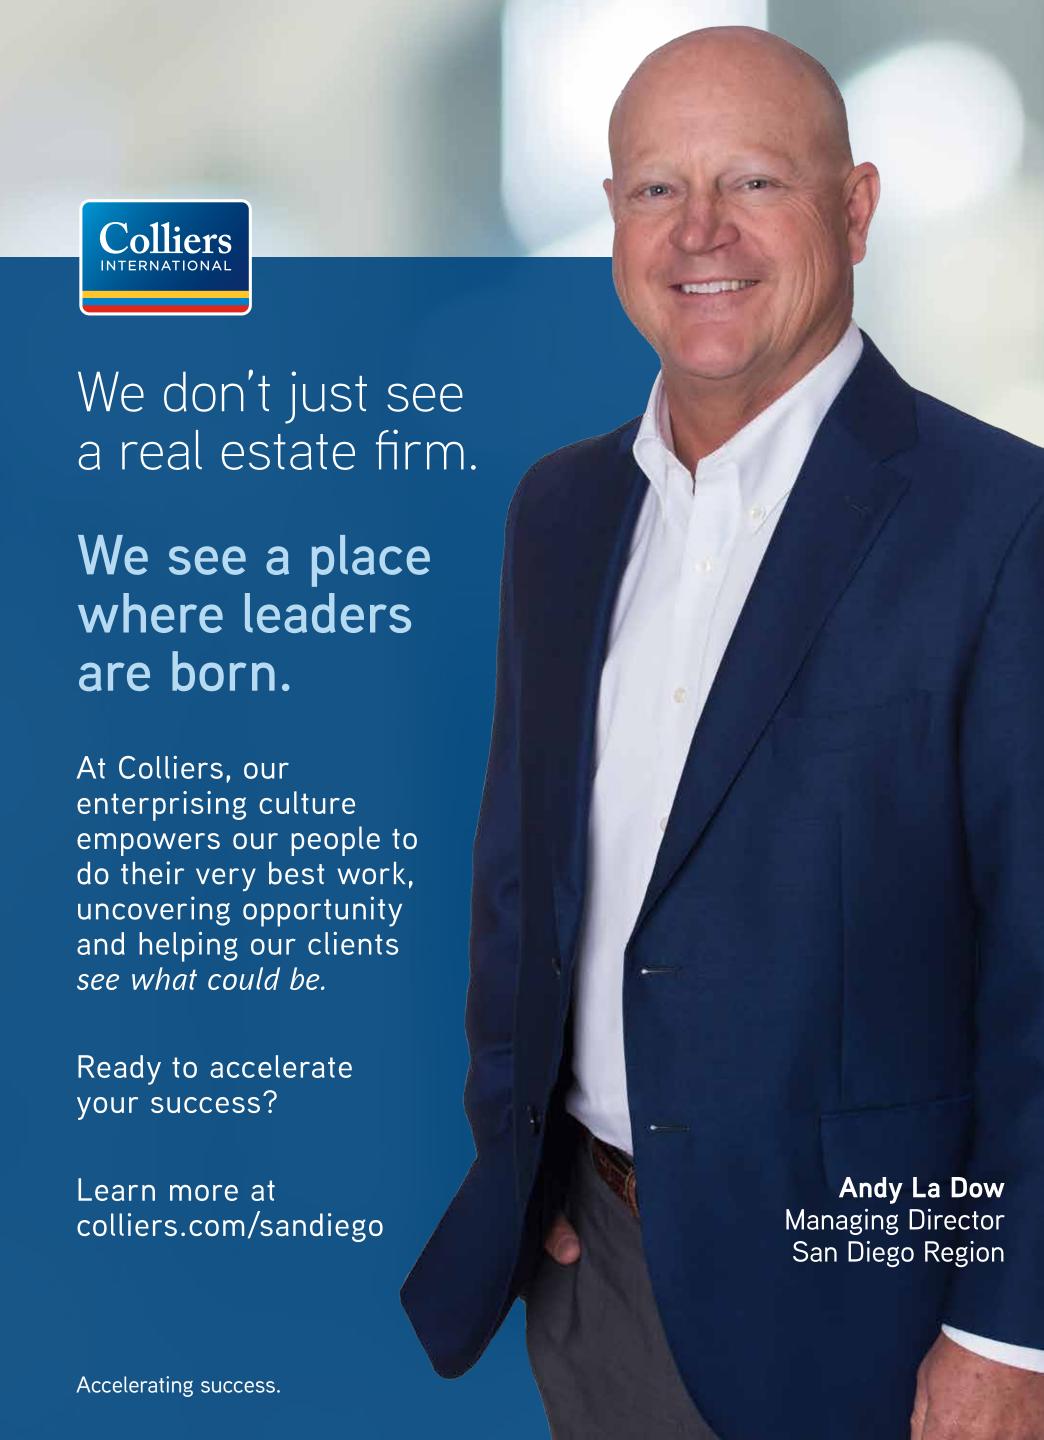

Al Baldwin also joins the icon list this year. Baldwin is CEO/chairman of Baldwin & Sons, the developer of South County's Otay Ranch. David and Leslie Cohn, co-founders of the Cohn Restaurant Group have also joined our icon list this year. The husband and wife team opened their first restaurant in 1982 and since then have amassed an eclectic collection of nearly two dozen restaurants throughout the region, including The Prado at Balboa Park, Indigo Grill, and 333 Pacific. They also co-founded the Garfield School Foundation in 1996, a culinary arts program for at-risk youths.

Also being added to the icon list this year is T.W. (Bill) Hoehn III. As the third generation to work in the car dealership business – he succeeded both his father and grandfather -- the Hoehn name has become synonymous with San Diego new cars. Hoehn has served on the boards of the San Diego County YMCA, Fuller Foundation and the Bishop's School. Also a name connected to automobiles in San Diego is Stephen Cushman who joins our icon list this year. Cushman is a fourth-generation San Diegan whose career includes real estate development, auto dealerships, and he has also been a key advisor to mayors, councils and commissions. He served on more than 70 boards and his family owns the Grossmont Center in La Mesa.

Qualcomm CEO Steve Mollenkopf joins the icon list this year. He has been CEO of Qualcomm since 2014 and previously served the company as president and COO. He has steered the major San Diego company through several legal battles and this past year won a significant legal battle with the FTC. Thomas Sudberry Jr. founded Sudberry Properties in 1979. He has developed retail, office, multifamily and mixed use projects throughout the region and he joins our Icon list this year.

Now the question is who will join next year's list of Icons? Detailed profiles of these icons and others begin on page 72.

Interim CEO, Feeding San Diego Established: 2007

Mission Statement

Feeding San Diego is on a mission to connect every person facing hunger with nutritious meals by maximizing food rescue. The organization provides more than 31.2 million meals every year to children, families, seniors, college students, military families, and veterans in partnership with a network of 320 non-profit partners. More than 92% of the food provided to the community is rescued. By diverting more than 27.6 million pounds of food from the landfill every year, Feeding San Diego reduces greenhouse gas emissions by nearly 25,000 metric tons of CO2 - the equivalent of taking 5,300 cars off the road for a year.

Goals for 2020-2021

Feeding San Diego is working diligently to maintain its increased level of service to people facing hunger during the COVID-19 pandemic. Through a decentralized food recovery and distribution network, Feeding San Diego is focused on increasing access to food assistance, strengthening food rescue, enhancing community partnerships, advocating for the evolving needs of people experiencing hunger and building upon equity, diversity and inclusion initiatives

Service Area

San Diego and Imperial Counties

Fundraising Events (or Areas of Funding)

Feeding San Diego provides a comprehensive approach to hunger-relief and nutrition through our Feeding Kids, Feeding Families, Feeding Seniors, Feeding Heroes, and Feeding Excellence initiatives. Each initiative offers service with a sense of dignity at sites across the region, supporting people facing short-term crises and those with a need for ongoing assistance. Dependable, consistent distributions provide fresh produce and nutritious pantry staples at convenient locations.

Feeding Kids: Serves children and youth facing hunger through a variety of programs including School Pantry, After School and Summer Meals, and Agency Partner programs.

Feeding Families: Provides healthy meals to families through Mobile Pantry, College Partnership, and Agency Partner programs.

Feeding Seniors: Provides seniors with healthy meals through partnerships with senior-focused distributions, as well as the Mobile Pantry and Agency Partner programs.

Feeding Heroes: Serves active-duty military families and veterans through School Pantry, Mobile Pantry, and Agency Partner programs.

Feeding Excellence: Feeding San Diego further supports the community through CalFresh Outreach, Agency Capacity Building, Healthcare Partnerships, and Advocacy.

Volunteer Opportunities

Join Feeding San Diego and nearly 10,000 individuals who dedicate their time to help feed hundreds of thousands of children, families and seniors in need every year. Volunteers help with a variety of projects, including sorting, cleaning, bagging and boxing food, as well as administrative support. Volunteering is a rewarding experience that is fun for the whole family - ages six and up are welcome.

During the COVID-19 pandemic, Feeding San Diego is currently recruiting volunteers who are 18 years of age and have a current food handler card. Visit feedingsandiego.org/volunteer to get involved.

Giving Opportunities

Feeding San Diego relies on philanthropic support from individuals, foundations, corporations and the community to fund critical programs for people facing hunger - especially now, as the COVID-19 pandemic has increased the need for food assistance in San Diego County by 50%. Every dollar donated helps provide up to four nutritious meals for those facing hunger. Learn more at feedingsandiego.org/donate.

The Grove

The Grove is a giving circle for individual supporters of Feeding San Diego to help end hunger in our community. Passionate members of The Grove make an annual gift of $1,000 or more to sustain and enhance hunger-relief and food rescue programs in San Diego County.

Monthly Giving

Make a difference each month for San Diegans facing hunger. As a monthly donor, individuals provide reliable support to ensure that Feeding San Diego is able to distribute meals to children, families, seniors, and people in need throughout the year.

Corporate Partnerships

Corporate partnerships help Feeding San Diego sustain its critical hunger-relief programs. Opportunities to make an impact include sponsorships, cause marketing, and employee engagement.

Leave a Legacy

Create a legacy for your family by including Feeding San Diego in your will, trust, IRA, or insurance policy.

CalSavers Retirement Savings Program: WHAT SMALL BUSINESSES NEED TO KNOW

What is CalSavers?

CalSavers is California's new retirement savings program that will offer millions of workers in California the opportunity to get on track for the future. This workplace retirement savings program, implemented by the state, enables employees of small businesses to make an automatic payroll contribution into a personal IRA retirement account.

How will CalSavers impact employers?

Many small businesses would like to offer retirement options to their employees — to help attract a talented workforce and boost employee morale — but can't afford the overhead and administrative costs. CalSavers provides a way for small business employees to participate in a retirement program without incurring the associated burdens of employer-sponsored retirement programs. With CalSavers, employers do not contribute to funds, manage funds, or have any responsibility for financial advice.

What are the requirements for small businesses?

The requirement for small businesses to offer a retirement savings plan or facilitate CalSavers is being rolled out in phases.

- The first deadline, for employers with more than 100 employees, was September 30, 2020.
- Employers with more than 50 employees will need to comply by July 1, 2021.
- Employers with more than five employees will need to comply by July 1, 2022.

Businesses with fewer than 5 employees and those that already offer a qualified employer-sponsored retirement option are not subject to these requirements.

Jason Paguio

2020 has been an especially challenging year for small businesses. As part of the San Diego and Imperial Small Business Development Center network, we're proud of the work our center and network has achieved in providing no-cost technical assistance and language support to disadvantaged small businesses throughout the County:

- $201,389,142 in Capital Infusion
- 51,704 Jobs Supported
- 6,274 Unique Clients Served
- 23,451 Hours of 1-on-1 Business Counseling
- 746 Training Events with 17,870 Attendees

As part of the Strategic Alliance of Ethnic Chambers of Commerce, we provided outreach to underserved small businesses in some of the region's most impacted areas. Working alongside two dozen community partner organizations, we reached over 40,000 small businesses in helping them navigate COVID-19 safety protocols, compliance, relief, and recovery.

Our work is never done and the Asian Business Association San Diego, the Strategic Alliance of Ethnic Chambers, our community partners, and the San Diego & Imperial Valley Small Business Development Center network are here to assist those in need.

The latest fundraising is the largest private financing in the GI space since 2014.

The 4-year-old preclinical biotech now has enough runway to extend throughout 2023, said Mark McKenna president and CEO of Prometheus. The company has roughly four promising IBD drugs either in the clinic or IND ready.

"We are pleased to have the support of such outstanding investors who share our dedication and vision to build the world's leading precision medicine company for IBD," said McKenna. "We are now well-positioned to advance the clinical development of our lead antibody program targeting TL1A-associated IBD and grow our emerging pipeline of precision medicine programs designed to deliver life-changing outcomes for patients."

Spun Out in 2016

Founded in 2016, the company spun out of Cedars-Sinai Medical Center after building a considerable portion of its scientific foundation around the work of Stephan Targan, an IBD specialist who founded the IBD Center at the medical center some 28 years ago.

The San Diego-based firm pioneers a precision medicine approach for inflammatory bowel disease (IBD) diagnosis and treatment with its precision medicine platform, Prometheus 360.

Prometheus's plan is to identify new drug targets for subgroups of patients with the disease, tapping into its dataset with more than 200,000 samples from about 20,000 patients.

The first of those clinical programs is slated to begin in a matter of weeks, putting McKenna's team on track to their first round of human data.

Their lead program—PRA023—is an anti-TL1A antibody. But they're not alone. Pfizer has a similar program. But

"We are pleased to have the support of such outstanding investors who share our dedication and vision to build the world's leading precision medicine company for IBD,. MARK MCKENNA

McKenna has ambitions to build a broad pipeline around IBD.

"Our platform Prometheus 360 is differentiated. Not only in GI but across potentially other therapeutic areas," said McKenna.

Major Collaborations

The company has entered several collaborations to develop targeted therapies for IBD.

In August, it formed a partnership with Dr. Falk Pharma GmbH to develop and commercialize PR600, a cell signaling program that targets the receptor of the tumor necrosis factor superfamily for treating IBD. PR600 is currently in preclinical development.

In 2019, the company inked a deal with Japan's Takeda Pharmaceutical to use its bioinformatics tools to find up to three potential therapies for IBD, as well as companion diagnostics—tests that can indicate how well a patient is likely to respond to a certain treatment.

Prometheus aims to identify and validate a trio of new drug targets for Takeda to move into drug discovery and beyond. It received an undisclosed amount of money up front and, under the deal terms, could get up to $420 million in payments tied to potential

As is typical in such deals, the agreement also allows for royalties from sales of any therapies that reach the market.

'The IBD treatment landscape has seen limited innovation to date despite an enormous effort to unlock benefit from traditional therapeutic approaches," said Joy Ghosh, senior research analyst at Eventide. "Prometheus has the potential to disrupt the space with its precision medicine approach as well as its genotype-phenotype Prometheus 360 drug discovery platform designed to create novel IBD medicines to benefit patients."

Potential IPO on Horizon

McKenna served as a former Salix Pharmaceuticals executive before joining as Prometheus's new CEO in 2019. He spent about four years at Salix, a GI-focused specialty pharmaceutical company owned bу Bausch Health, formerly known as Valeant Pharmaceuticals.

Prometheus is guided by its board of directors, led by Chairman Tachi Yamada, M.D.,

Mark McKenna CEO Prometheus Bio

and a scientific advisory board composed of key opinion leaders in IBD, including Stephan Targan, M.D., William Sandborn, M.D. and Dermot P. McGovern, M.D., Ph.D.

Prometheus Biosciences, previously known as Precision IBD, bought Prometheus Laboratories from Nestle Health Sciences this past summer. The company has raised nearly $520 million in total funding, to date.

Headquartered in Sorrento Valley, the company has grown to 130 staffers with the possibility of an IPO in the near future.

"We believe that we can be a true IND engine. Down the road, our vision is to be in a position where we're able to crank out a new IND every single year," said McKenna. "With this marquee financing that we completed with top tier investors, I believe we're well capitalized to fulfill that vision." ■

Returning backers Revolution's Rise of the Rest Seed Fund, Link Ventures, Halogen Ventures, Western Technology Investment and Techstars Ventures (among others) also participated in the round.

The company plans to use its new funds to aggressively expand its sales and marketing efforts as well as broaden and accelerate its product development, said Cody Barbo chief executive at Trust & Will.

Digital Estate Planning

Founded in 2017, Trust & Will is modernizing the trust and estate planning industry with an easy, fast, and secure way to set up your estate plan

Its makes software to help the average erson create wills and legal trusts. The company also provides tools to make digital legal guardianship directives.

Barbo, who is 30, co-founded the company with Daniel Goldstein and Brian Lamb. He says the idea for the company arose at a time in which he and other team members were starting to get married, have kids and also begin thinking about whether they had a will or a trust.

Fast forward, since launching its first product in 2018, Trust & Will has secured strategic partnerships with several institutions including Fifth Third Bank, AARP, Mint.com, Acorns, Haven Life Insurance and Girl Scouts of the USA.

Providing Accessibility

Estate planning is a $22 billion annual industry with about half of all adults in the U.S. having no will at all, said Barbo. This includes an estimated 45 million parents with minor children.

Its customers span a range of demographics, but its two sweet spots are 30 to 55 year olds who are married with minor children, homeowners and first time estate planning makers or assisting an elderly family member with their own estate plan.

Victor Echevarria, a partner with Jackson Square Ventures said the company's digital solution "makes it easy to securely create and manage an estate plan online, eliminating barriers and obstacles that have left countless families unprepared for decades."

"Estate planning is the single most impactful thing you can do to protect your loved ones from the unexpected. But for most families it's become little more than an afterthought," he added.

While Trust & Will's self-service option is designed for young families with less than $1 million in assets, the company also has begun offering support for customers with more complex estate planning needs.

In addition, customers can pay a onetime fee or an annual subscription to have their documents hosted on Trust & Will's Internet cloud.

Trust & Will's products aren't the only ones out there. Other companies, such as LegalZoom, also offer estate-planning services for those looking to get documents want to pay an estate-planning attorney. Trust & Will claims its service is easier to use than its competitors'

Making History

As part of its partnership with Notarize, a pioneer in virtual notary adoption, Trust & Will completed the first electronic Will (e-Will) in Florida history a few months ago. It also completed the first eWill in U.S. history in Nevada in 2019.

Earlier this year, the company also began offering its platform at no cost to financial advisors, so far more than 1,000 have signed up.

VICTOR ECHEVARRIA

Barbo is the former founder and CEO of Industry, a career-oriented, LinkedIn-like platform for hospitality workers and employers. Lamb and Goldstein previously worked in product design, custom software development and marketing for agencies.

The company hired former General Asembly CFO John Zdanowski to take on the startup's chief financial officer role.

Headquartered in Little Italy, it employs roughly 24 local staffers. The company plans to double its headcount over the next year.

"Our vision is to be the household name for modern estate planning," said Barbo. "Over the years to come we will continue building out our platform for tens of millions of families to create and manage their estate plan online, and eventually to facilitate an end-to-end digital transfer of wealth." ■

$12M Training Center Being Built

Squash Courts to Be Used to Motivate Youth

■ By RAY HUARD

A nonprofit agency that uses the sport of squash to motivate under-served youths to excel in school is building a $12 million school and training center in Chollas View in Southeast San Diego..

With Pacific Building Group as the general contractor, Access Youth Academy's center will include a training section with eight squash courts along with classrooms for educational programs.

"It will be a beacon of light in that community," said Renato Paiva, executive director of Access Youth Academy.

Squash has a reputation of being "very much a white privilege game" that only rich people play, Paiva said. His goal is to change that, to use squash as a means of helping underprivileged students

The 21,000 complex at 704 Euclid Ave. will become a U.S. Squash Community Affiliate – the first on the West Coast – when it opens in June 2021.

The two-story building will be divided into two wings with a glass-walled entry and open reception and lounge area that will have ceilings reaching to 24 feet.

The north wing will have lockers, shower rooms and seven European-design singles squash courts and one doubles court with a glassed-in catwalk overlooking the courts.

The rear of the north wing includes five roll-up garage doors

"It kind of opens the building to the outdoors," Slater said.

The south wing will include two classrooms, storage, and a larger area divided by operable partitions that will include a computer room, a college preparatory room and instructional space on the ground level.

It also will include a 1,000 square-foot open gallery and space to display awards, 12 open offices, two private offices, a large conference room, and a staff kitchen/breakroom.

The building will open onto a concrete courtyard with additional seating and a parking lot with 36 spaces.

Founded in 2006, Access Youth Academy provides students with an after-school program from seventh grade through high school with support through college and two years after students finish college.

Something Different

The project is a first for Pacific Building Group, said Susie Slater, project manager.

"Nobody's ever built this on the West Coast," Slater said.

The company has built a number of schools and recreation projects, but never a squash center.

"We're having to evaluate each position to make sure it's conducive to play," Slater said. "One of the things that surprised me is the ball is very hard and they hit it very hard, over 100 miles per hour. It's a lot of force. We evaluated that and decided to put some pretty heavy duty cages around the sprinklers. That was kind of a unique condition to this."

The Sport

The game of squash is similar to racquet ball, although the racquets it's played with are bigger and the balls are smaller and harder.

"It's a great sport for beginners, intermediate, all the

Hera Hub Expanding Despite Pandemic

Coworking Company Feels Confident About Future

■ By RAY HUARD

Hera Hub, a coworking company based in Sorrento Valley, is expanding amid the COVID-19 pandemic that has many real estate experts wondering how workplace offices will evolve and some coworking organizations going out of business.

"I feel confident that in 2021, we're posed to grow quite a bit," said Felena Hanson, founder of Hera Hub.

Formed in 2011 by Hanson, Hera Hub focuses on women although the company includes men in its more than 500 members in six locations including Mission Valley, Sorrento Valley, Carlsbad, Irvine, Temecula and Washington, D.C.

Felena Hanson Founder Hera Hub

"We are going to be expanding to other cities in 2021," Hanson said. She declined to say how many or where they were, pending signed contracts, but she said some are in California and two are out of state.

Outlook

"I think there is a strong market ahead as we get the (COVID-19) vaccine and start to turn the corner in 2021," Hanson said. "I think companies, even large companies, will look to coworking spaces for their employees. They realize that having their employees work at home all day, every day works for some but not everybody. Coworking fills that niche of availability. That's what people are looking for."

Hanson said some bigger coworking businesses with women as the target market over-extended themselves and weren't nimble enough to respond to the downturn caused by the pandemic.

"It's kind of a slow and steady wins the race," Hanson said.

While bigger companies raised far more money, "We stayed I'd like to stay lean and mean," Hanson said. "It has allowed us to expand without having to raise millions of dollars, frankly."

COVID-19

Like others, Hera Hub saw a dramatic drop in people using its offices during the early days of the pandemic, but kept its Mission Valley and Sorrento Valley offices open for essential workers and even extended its hours to stay open 24 hours.

"The last several months have been touch-and-go a little bit," Hanson said. "Overall, through the pandemic, we've lost about 15% of our membership. In the scheme of things, we've been able to maintain most of our members."

Hera Hub has made adjustments in its operations as a result of the pandemic, including adopting protocols recommended by health officials to provide work spaces that maintain social distancing.

The firm also has expanded its online offerings.

"People have found the online, virtual community to be important, especially during these times," Hanson said.

Hanson said coworking has remained an attractive alternative to working at home with many companies closing their offices during the pandemic.

"Working from home can be challenging. It can be very distracting, especially if you have spouses and partners and children and pets." Hanson said. "It's not easy to have even a 10-minute chunk of time to actually focus. Our members come in to escape, to have a sanctuary where they can focus. For them, getting out of their home environment, even if it's for just one or two days a week for just a couple of hours. It's a life saver for them."

Others

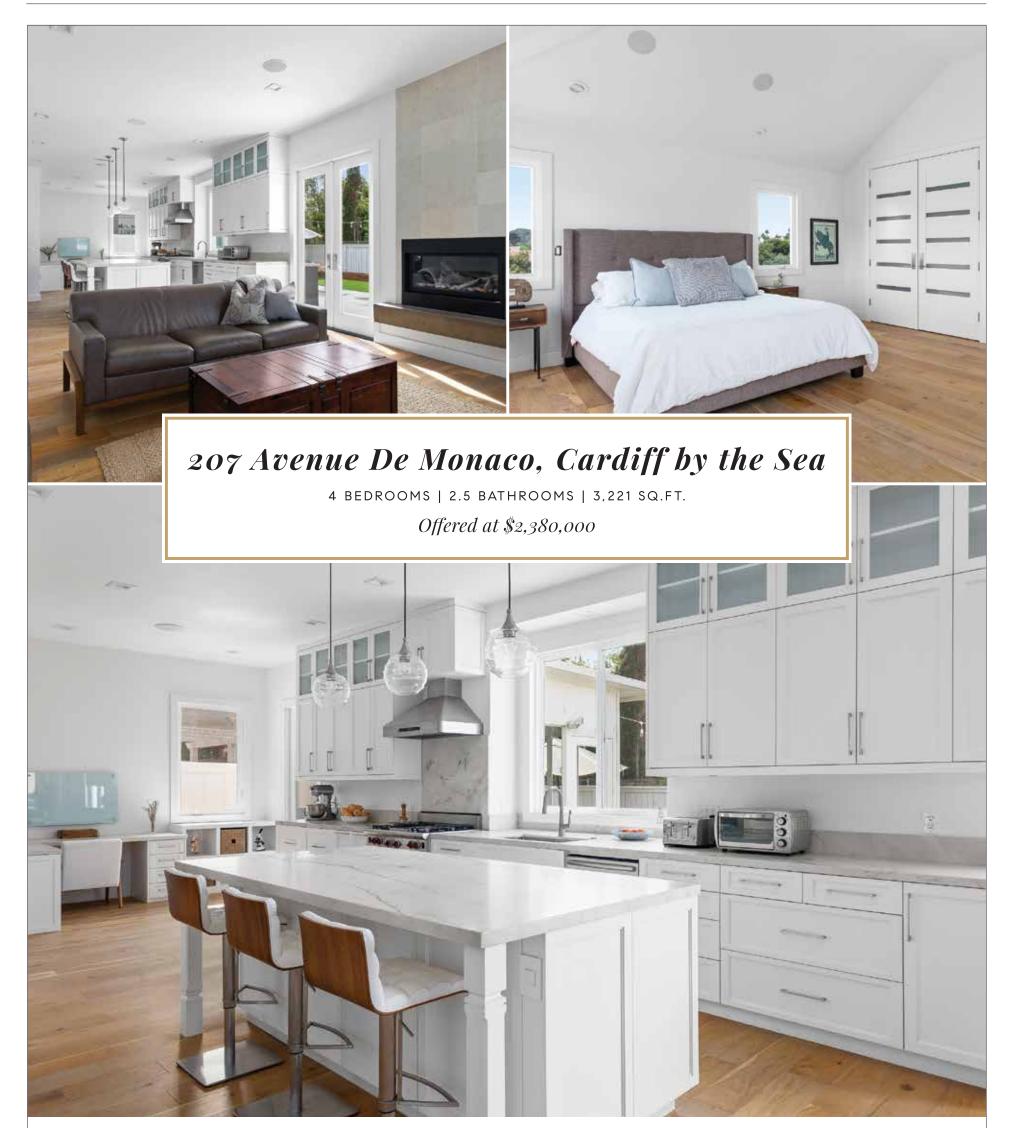

Hanson is not the only San Diego County coworking entrepreneur to see the pandemic as an opportunity.

Developer and real estate investor Wolf Bielas in August announced that he was renovating a Carlsbad office building near Palomar Airport to include coworking space.

Bielas is managing partner of Downtown Works in Little Italy.

Like Hanson, Bielas said coworking offices people an alternative during the pandemic as they tire of working from home.

way up to the higher levels," Paiva said. Squash has a strong following on the East Coast and in Europe but not so much on the West Coast.

The seven singles squash courts will be 21 feet wide by 32 feet deep. The doubles court will be 25 feet wide by 44 feet deep.

The back wall will be glass and about seven feet tall. The three sidewalls will be wood.

"The concrete floor that we poured had pretty tight tolerances because the court has to meet certain dimensions in order to be certified," Slater said.

The final wood flooring that will be installed on topo of the concrete is similar to a basketball court, but the flooring for this project will be imported from Germany," Slater said.

"There's only a couple of companies that do this. It's a plank floor. It comes as boards, they we lay down the boards," Slater said.

The Program

Access Youth Academy has partnered with Kipp Adelante Preparatory Academy, a nearby charter school for elementary and middle school students that Pacific Building Group also built.

A native of Brazil, Paiva joined Access Youth Academy in May 2007

Susie Slater Project Manager Pacific Building Group

after serving as assistant squash coach at Harvard University and the University of Southern California.

The academy has an enrollment of 120 students and has been leasing space at The Preuss School UCSD, a charter high school in La Jolla, Paiva said

Once the new center opens, Paiva said he hopes to serve about 1,300 students through a variety of programs.

"With this facility, we're going to basically triple the amount of impact we have with our after-school programs. In addition, we're going to have the opportunity with the new facility to serve many more kids in different capacities," Paiva said.

Paiva has ambitious goals for the new center.

Eventually, he said it could become a hub for squash on the West Coast, especially if squash becomes an Olympic sport.

"There's a high probability that not only Team USA, but teams from around the world are going to be using our facility as their training center," Paiva said.

"Since that time, we've made several acquisitions and people like what they're seeing and it's (life science) a pretty hot market type, especially in the world of COVID," Bonanno said.

More to Come

IQHQ CEO Steve Rosetta said in a statement that the latest round of the firm's financing "validates IQHQ's solid strategy, our exceptional team, and our success in identifying and securing premier life science developments in top markets."

"It is important to take this opportunity to reflect on all that we have accomplished since our initial raise, and the most exciting part is that we are just getting started," Rosetta said.

The firm raised $770 million in its first round of financing.

The infusion of capital will fuel the company's development pipeline that includes 4.4 million square feet of life science projects in Boston in addition to the 1.7 million square feet of life science office space and 200,000 square feet of retail planned for downtown San Diego.

John Bonanno Chief Investment Officer IQHQQ

The Boston project is estimated to cost $1 billion.

Bonanno said IQHQ also has acquired a 27-acre site in West Cambridge near Boston where it plans to build another life science project.

"It's a pretty big life science area back there," Bonanno said. "We're going to build several buildings.

He said the project will have 650,000 square feet of rentable space.

"It's a suburban project it's still very much transportation oriented and surrounded by tons of housing," Bonanno said.

IQHQ also is planning a 300,000 square-foot life science project in San Francisco.

Moving

Although barely a year-old, IQHQ by the financing method it chose is "predestined to become a private company, Bonanno said, adding that based on the current timetable, that could happen by mid-2024.

"It might possibly be extended out a big longer," Bonanno said. "We're fired up getting it done.'

The firm also plans to move its headquarters to downtown San Diego.

IQHQ in September acquired a more than eight-acre site along the San Diego waterfront that had been part of the Manchester Pacific Gateway project to build what it's named the San Diego Research and Development District (RaDD).

At the time, the firm said the project will include a 17-story tower, several labs, office buildings and a museum.

"It's really a great opportunity to do something and sort of be a destination for a lot of people," Bonanno said.

Excavation has begun on that first phase of the project that will include four buildings taking up about half the space of the overall project and a piazza, Bonanno said.

Carrie Bobb & Co. announced on LinkedIn that it was handling leasing of the San Diego project.

"Corrugated metal is kind of the unwritten national material of Australia.

"It's a material that Aussies working in the U.S., we like to bring onto our projects as a little nod to our home team. It installs easily and it lasts forever. The more we can educate people about corrugated metal, the better for us.'

Wilson said the project is being built on "one of the last large infill lots left" in Imperial Beach on the site of what was once an orchard/ranch.

David McCullough of McCullough Landscape Architecture designed the landscaping.

The site is 1.4 miles from the beach and half-a-mile to the Tijuana Estuary, De Bartolo said.

"We had studied the sun path and we wanted to maximize the amount of daytime sunlight that would reach all of the courtyards and backyard spaces."

PAULY DE BARTOLO

The Homes

The two-story homes will be priced from the mid-700,000s, Wilson said. Six of the homes have their own courtyards.

With four different floor plans, each of the homes has three bedrooms, 2.5 bathrooms, a den or spare room, a two-car garage plus one uncovered parking space and backyards.

Most also have Juliet bedroom balconies, according to the Breezeline website.

Aside from its use of corrugated metal, the style of the homes with tilted shed roofs is far from the typical Mediterranean look of many housing developments.

"Shed roofs kind of go off in different directions and really look quite dynamic," De Bartolo said. "We had studied the sun path and we wanted to maximize the amount of daytime sunlight that would reach all of the courtyards and backyard spaces. By going to the shed roofs, we were able to maximize the sunlight."

Although the homes don't come with photovoltaic solar panels, De Bartolo said they're solar ready" and the garages have been wired for electric vehicle charging stations.

Overlooked

Wilson and De Bartolo said Imperial Beach has long been given short shrift in the past, but that's starting to change.

"If you want to have the Southern California lifestyle but you're priced out of some of the other communities, Imperial Beach is a phenomenal alternative because it provides all of the amenities of a beachside lifestyle without the expense that some of the communities have," De Bartolo said. "If people are willing to go and experience it and the city an opportunity, they're going to be very surprised. There's an awful lot more going on there than people think."

Wilson said the city is "perhaps the most overlooked value.3

"It's kind of taking off but it's still under the radar."

DeBartolo said Breezeline is "an opportunity for young families to buy into Imperial Beach and make a home for themselves in this community."

"To me, the intent was to design for young families that want to have a coastal lifestyle." ■ affordable apartments.

The company won't say how much it will cost to build nor will they say what they'll charge in monthly rent.

The Site

Taking up a little more than a half-acre, the project is bounded by Union, Ash and Front streets taking up half a city block.

The site had been home to Aladdin Bail Bonds and several other tenants in flex-industrial buildings razed to make room for Simone.

The 612,000 square-foot Simone at 1401 Union Street was designed by Joseph Wong Design Associates, headquartered in downtown San Diego.

"Our concept is really to come up with an iconic, modern tower that could become a landmark," Wong said, adding that the location "is as good as it gets and that it "demanded a modern, iconic structure."

"We have a very talk tower. Visually, it's going to be very interesting, especially from the very top, the 36th and 35th floor," Wong said. "It should be a really unique project for downtown San Diego."

Because the building is elevated over a parking garage, Wong said that "pretty much every unit has a nice view."

Simone is a joint venture among Trammell Crow Residential, Pacific Life Insurance and AAA Management.

Amenities

With 30 floors of apartments atop three levels of underground parking and four-levels of above-ground parking with a total of 442 parking spaces, Simone is designed to be LEED Gold certified, signifying its energy efficiency.

The apartments will range from 577 square-foot studios to 1,097 square-foot two-bedroom apartments.

The five penthouse flats on the top three floors will be 1,500 square feet and face west.

All of the apartments will have floor-to-ceiling windows and ceilings of nine to 10 feet. The penthouse apartments will have ceilings of more than 15 feet in the penthouse units.

About 95% of the apartments also will have balconies with glass railings. Most have water views.

The apartments will have gourmet kitchens, stainless steel appliances, hard-surface flooring, walk-in closets, and spa-inspired baths.

Shared amenities will include a landscaped rooftop pool, spa and entertainment area, a Sky Club with panoramic views of the city and an adjacent deck with barbecues, fire pits, and gathering spaces that face west for the best view.

"We really wanted to emphasize the out-doors," Wong said.

There's also a gourmet demonstration kitchen, indoor and outdoor lounges and dining areas, a fitness center, a 100,000 square-foot outdoor lounge with a movie projector screen, a dog park, pet lounge and spa, Amazon lockers, a bicycle repair shop with storage and a coworking business center.

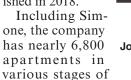

Cassoloto said Simone "has more amenity space than any other project in Little Italy."

Projects

Swinerton Builders is the general contractor. Also working on the project are Nasland Engineering based in Kearny Mesa, EPT Designs of Pasadena land-scape architects, and Parisa O'Connell development in Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside and San Bernardino counties.

Design of San Francisco.

Trammel Crow Residential's other project in San Diego is Alexan, an East Village residential tower with 313 apartments finished in 2018.

According to some reports, the COVID-19 pandemic has led some prospective renters to look more to suburban markets than core urban centers.

Cassolato of Trammel Crow Residential declined to say if the pandemic has had any effect on their latest San Diego project, but she said that Little Italy has both the excitement of an urban site and many of the aspects that make the suburbs attractive.

"Little Italy is the best of both worlds. Offering a walkable neighborhood experience in a live-work-plan environment," Cassolato said.

Virbela

International Play

Looking forward, the company's goal is to keep pace with global demand.

Virbela added five new languages for international customers including Brazilian Portuguese, Chinese, French, and Spanish.

It plans to add German and Japanese localization by the end of the year.

"We've grown many multiples both in terms of revenue and in user base, however, despite the acceleration of COVID we're still in kind of an early adopter model," said Howland. "We're seeing virtual worlds starting to become more of a norm for socialization and I think that trend will continue, rolling into education and enterprise."

In 2018, Virbela was acquired by eXp World Holdings for $11 million after becoming its largest customer. Based in Bellingham, eXp operates two subsidiaries, one is a cloud-based residential real estate business and the other is Virbela.

The publicly traded company's revenue topped $979 million last year. This year, its revenue soared. In November, eXp reported $564 million in third-quarter revenue, up nearly 100% from the same period in 2019 when it brought in $282.2 million. eXp has more than 700 employees, with only one physical location required to meet regulations.

Successful IPO

Founded in 2014, Maravai is a global provider of life science reagents and services to researchers and biotech firms.

In particular, it provides products and services that help life-sciences companies develop vaccines, therapies, and diagnostics.

The business has the advantage of having some heavy hitters in San Diego's biotech scene involved.

Working With Biopharma

Maravai has more than 5,000 customers, including many leading biopharmaceutical companies such as Synthorx, Thermo Fisher Scientific, and Ultragenyx Pharmaceutical.

It focuses on nucleic acids, biologic safety testing and protein detection for companies pursuing cell and gene therapies, including messenger RNA vaccines for COVID-19.

The company's CleanCap technology is used by five Covid-19 vaccine programs, including one led by Pfizer and BioNTech.

Those companies recently submitted a request to U.S. regulators for an emergency authorization to sell their vaccine, which they have said is 95% effectives

Hull is the company's CEO and is the former CEO of longtime San Diego biotech Gen-Probe, which is now part of Hologic.

Maravai LifeSciences is a portfolio company of GTCR, a private equity firm based in Chicago, that focuses on investing in growth companies in financial services, technology and information services, and healthcare. The company's portfolio includes Vector Laboratories, TriLink Bio-Technologies, Cygnus Technologies and Glen Research.

Since launch, Maravai LifeSciences has managed a war chest of $300 million to buy and grow life sciences companies.

San Diego has no shortage of life sciences companies feeding and driving the drug development ecosystem, making the region a good place for such acquisition-driven ventures.

To date, the company has acquired four life sciences companies, one of which recently moved into a new 105,000-square foot headquarters in San Diego.

Harjit Kullar, Maravai's vice president of marketing told the business journal earlier this year that the company's model is to take "good companies and make them great."

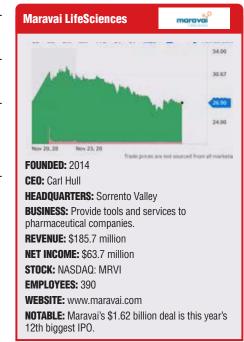

"The founders have taken them as far as they want to take them, and then we come in with our management expertise and see if we can take them to the next level," said Kullar.

Maravai LifeSciences went public on Nov. 13, raising $1.62 billion in an initial public stock offering. The company makes products used to develop gene and cell-based therapies, including a leading vaccine candidate for COVID-19.

Headquartered in Sorrento Valley, the company has 390 employees, up from 181 employees in 2016. Maravai's $1.62 billion deal is this year's 12th biggest IPO, according to Dealogic. ■
