San Diego 500 Icon List Sees New Additions

LEADERSHIP: Business and Organization Leaders Leave Legacy of Lasting Change

By JAY HARN

The San Diego community has many people who have contributed so much to its economic story over the years that they have left a legacy of lasting change. These people can only be described as icons.

This year, The San Diego Business Journal again honors these individuals whose names have become synonymous with the city and the region.

Several new additions have been added to this year’s list of icons, including: Lidia S. Martinez who recently retired from Southwest Airlines and has been recognized for her giving spirit and deeply rooted sense of community. She is one of five individuals who successfully created the outreach platform for Southwest to invest and engage in communities of color helping her company set the standard for outreach and corporate social responsibility. Also being added to the icon list this year is T.W. (Bill) Hoehn III. As the third generation to work in the car dealership business – he succeeded both his father and grandfather -- the Hoehn name has become synonymous with San Diego new cars. Hoehn has served on the boards of the San Diego County YMCA, Fuller Foundation and the Bishop’s School.

As president and COO. He has steered the major San Diego company through several legal battles and this past year won a significant legal battle with the FTC.

CalSavers Retirement Savings Program: WHAT SMALL BUSINESSES NEED TO KNOW

What is CalSavers?
CalSavers is California’s new retirement savings program that will offer millions of workers in California the opportunity to get on track for the future. This workplace retirement savings program, implemented by the state, enables employees of small businesses to make an automatic payroll contribution into a personal IRA retirement account.

How will CalSavers impact employers?
Many small businesses would like to offer retirement options to their employees — to help attract a talented workforce and boost employee morale — but can’t afford the overhead and administrative costs. CalSavers provides a way for small business employees to participate in a retirement program without incurring the associated burdens of employer-sponsored retirement programs. With CalSavers, employers do not contribute to funds, manage funds, or have any responsibility for financial advice.

What are the requirements for small businesses?
The requirement for small businesses to offer a retirement savings plan or facilitate CalSavers is being rolled out in phases.

- The first deadline, for employers with more than 100 employees, was September 30, 2020.
- Employers with more than 50 employees will need to comply by July 1, 2021.
- Employers with more than five employees will need to comply by July 1, 2022.

Businesses with fewer than 5 employees and those that already offer a qualified employer-sponsored retirement option are not subject to these requirements.

Where can I find more information and enroll?
To enroll your small business in CalSavers call (855) 650-6916 or visit CalSavers.com.
